

Enough's Fife and Drum Corps

By Richard Van Wagoner

No celebration in early Lehi Would have been complete without street minstrels and dance musicians. The first parade on 24 July, 1854 was led by three fiddlers-Stephen H. Pierce., Alonzo D. Rhodes and Thomas Collett. Later that evening in the Log Schoolhouse, the string trio played cotillion, jig, and quadrille music for dancing. With the passing of time, numerous performers were to follow in the footsteps of these pioneer entertainers.

In the early 1880's, Abraham Enough, "a portly little Frenchman," organized a fife and drum corps which existed until the early 1890's. Over the years, many Lehi boys were a part of the Band. Oldtimers recalled with fond reverie the figure of Enough, "with his mouth crooked over his fife and his feet keeping time to the strain."

Source: Richard Van Wagoner's "Lehi-Portrait of a Utah Town" page 308.